BPM Partners Expands BPM Pulse Survey

Annual Survey Takes a Deeper Look at Budgeting, Reporting, Collaboration and the Cloud

Stamford, CT—December 15, 2011—BPM Partners, the leading independent authority on business performance management (BPM) solutions, has opened the 2012 BPM Pulse™ Survey – collecting information from end users about their BPM implementations and experience with specific vendors. Participants receive a copy of the annual survey results and can use it to benchmark their own projects and plans.

The annual survey identifies important trends in the market and reviews the success of the major solutions currently available. This year, based on user feedback, the BPM Pulse survey is expanding and diving deeper into several “spotlight” topics:

- Reporting and Analysis
- Budgeting and Planning
- Collaboration
- The Cloud and Big Data

“With the industry celebrating a full decade of widespread BPM adoption, the annual BPM Pulse survey offers a unique perspective on how far we’ve come with the help of these important business tools,” said Craig Schiff, founder and CEO of BPM Partners. “It also allows end users to gauge their own progress and plan for the next stages in their implementations.”

In September, BPM Partners marked ten years of business performance management industry coverage with a “then” and “now” timeline, detailing how budgeting, reporting and consolidations are handled inside corporations today and ten years ago.

BPM project champions, executive sponsors and team members can go to BPM Survey Central to participate in the 2012 study and reserve their copy of the detailed results. An executive summary of the 2011 Pulse results is now available in the BPM Whitepapers section of BPM Partners' site.
